Final Project Proposal

My final project will be a personal portfolio. It will consist of a home section followed by additional sections as you scroll down. At first glance, the sections will look very minimalistic with a header and an image, but as you click on the section or div (not sure if I want to put a button yet), it with slidetoggle to the left or right to display the content. If you click on the displayed content, it will return to the main section. The content section will consist mostly of text accompanied by a few links, images, and video.

Since I don't have much design experience (none at all really), a lot of this will be trial and error for me. I imagine it working extremely well, but if things conflict or cause issues for me, I'll be making changes along the way. I imagine it being more on the modern side of design with a minimalistic feel to it.
